Student Opinion Sought In War Questionnaire Today

Daily Sponsors Campaign — Part of International Attempt of World's Student Christian Federation to Determine Attitude of University Students Toward War — Ballot Boxes Placed in All Campus Buildings

STUDENT opinion on the subject of War will be ascertained today, when balloting on a specially-prepared questionnaire takes place in all campus buildings. This questionnaire, which was first printed on Tuesday, and is being reprinted today, is to be cut out by all students, the answers filled in, and the ballots then dropped into ballot-boxes provided in all the different buildings. The campaign is being sponsored by the "Daily."

The purpose of this campaign is to determine what students think about War, and under what circumstances, if any, they would support their country. The drive at McGill is part of an international endeavour sponsored by the World's Student Christian Federation at Geneva. The McGill Daily, heading the campaign here, has decided to extend it to other fields as well, other Canadian Universities being approached to carry out similar questionnaires there. Thus a representative student opinion on the subject will be obtained.

Scott Gives Views
When questioned yesterday afternoon about the questionnaire, Professor Scott and Dean Corbett of the Law Faculty gave their opinions on the subject. Professor Scott stated: "The last war left the world worse than it found it. The next war will leave it still poorer. All the conditions which make for war in 1914 exist today, and the present rulers of the world will be as powerless as in 1914 to preserve peace unless the people decide for themselves whether they are willing to start uselessly killing other young men as soon as some rich old men tell them to, or whether they have some better ideas as to how the world's problems should be solved."

"If any proposed plan or campaign can organize student opinion along these lines, it is to be welcomed. But it must avoid mere sensationalism and an uncritical use of the epithet 'Fascism.' Who makes war? Who profits by it? What machinery can be created for stopping them? How can we preserve civil liberties while still allowing for much-needed political changes? These are questions for serious consideration by students."

Dean Corbett Favors League
Dean Corbett, when asked whether Canada should withdraw from the League of Nations, stated that he was of the opinion that the League should not. Even though drastic changes may have to be made in its constitution, it is nevertheless indispensable for world peace.

Balloting in the other Canadian Universities will probably not take place today, as there has been a certain delay. But it is felt that reports from their questionnaires will be coming in shortly. When all these reports come in, one complete report will be drawn up, and forwarded to Geneva.

Players' Club Hears Address On Drama

Sidney Bunting Speaks at First Studio Lecture

Speaking on the subject of period costumes, particularly in relation to the drama, Sidney Bunting, of Architecture '35, addressed the members of the Players' Club at their first studio lecture of the season yesterday afternoon in the Club Room. The speech was illustrated by lantern slides showing the gradual development of the art of costuming and it dealt particularly with the detail of dress worn during the latter part of 18th century. This was of particular interest to

Mystery Of Foul Odours Discovered By Reporter

AT last we are answered! The problem that has perplexed Union amateurs for the last three weeks has been solved. No longer do Bert and Alex snoop and sniff about the basement wondering how much of the floor must be taken up to stop that awful, nauseating, verminous odour. No, it is not a dead rat, nor a decomposing Oka cheese, or even that very ripe Date bureau... it is... and here even now your faithful correspondent cannot repress a shudder—it is that rankst souvenir of Hell, burning brimstone.

The unsurpassed courage and detective genius which was exercised in the solving of this mystery will go down in journalistic history. (Ed. note: Boy with his nose glued to the

Dental Undergrads To Banquet Tonight

DENTAL undergrads gather this evening at the Cercle Universitaire, Sherbrooke St. East, for their annual banquet. Acting—Dean A. L. Walsh, Dr. I. K. Lowry and Dr. W. G. Leahy have been invited to be present and will deliver short addresses.

John Charnard, chairman of the banquet committee, assures the students that an epicurean feast is being catered, and beverages to suit will be served. The extensive facilities of the Cercle will be available, including the pool, ping pong, miniature golf and bridge rooms as well as the lounge.

The annual banquet serves as a means of introducing the freshman and sophomore classes at the college to the junior and senior years at the hospital clinic. A full turnout is expected. The banquet will commence at 7.30 p.m.

Spain's Historical Development And Beauty Described

Spanish Club Hears Consul-General's Address

Discussing the historical background of Spain, its natural beauties, the development of its language, the prominence of its art, and a description of the Prado. Senor Rolland, Consul-General of Spain, gave an address to a regular meeting of the Spanish Club held last night in Strathcona Hall. During the business part of the meeting, it was decided that further meetings of the Club will be held on every second Tuesday evening.

The speaker pointed out that the loss of Spain's colonies in South America was due to misrepresentations on the part of certain authors who fomented discontent among the natives and colonists. He then

Definite Date Set For Junior Prom

Tickets to be Sold on Friday by Faculty Representatives

According to the latest announcement made by the committee in charge, the Junior Prom is now definitely set for the 7th of December. The party will be held in the Windsor Hotel instead of at the Mount Royal as last year. The committee announces that the tickets will be on sale tomorrow at all the main college buildings. This year they will be sold at five dollars a couple, including the tax.

The committee has not yet decided upon the orchestra, but they are spending considerable time upon the question and have a number of prominent city bands in mind. This year there are a number of new ideas being considered for decorating the Ballroom, but as the actual room in the Windsor has not yet been chosen these plans

Novices Foregather At Second Practice

Will Discuss Granting of Titles to Canadians

The second practice night of the series which the McGill Debating Union is sponsoring will be held tonight at 7 o'clock in the Music Room of the Union. The resolution, of which either the negative or the positive side can be supported by the speaker, will be "That this House views as desirable the granting of titles in Canada." However, although this topic has been suggested, each speaker can discuss a subject of his own choosing, the only provision being that it be one of current interest. Each speaker will be allowed five minutes, after which his speech will be discussed and commented upon by the critic of the evening, with a view to correcting any faults in delivery or collection of material.

These practice nights have been designed particularly for those students who desire to perfect themselves in the art of public speaking, without taking an active part in the Debating Union. They will commence at seven, and be over at nine, to allow those participating to leave at that early hour for any other activity they have in mind. If they prove sufficiently popular, the executive of the Union plan to have Intercollegiate debaters to act as critics. The chairman on each occasion will be John McLeish, the vice president of the Union.

Curtain Rises Upon German Department Production Tonight

Initial Performance Starts at 8.30 in Moyse Hall

NO ADMISSION FEE

Knowledge of Language Unnecessary — Synopsis Included in Program

According to the most recent report, the German department are now fully prepared for the production of "Die Deutschen Kleinstädter" tonight at 8.30 in Moyse Hall. The fact that it is the first German play ever to be produced at McGill gives the undertaking even greater significance, stated the production manager. The invitation of the German Study Club of the University of Toronto to enact the farce in Hart House Theatre on November 28th is further tribute to the innovation, it was further reported.

A knowledge of the German language is not essential for the enjoyment of the play. Yesterday's Daily carried a summary in English and the programmes will include an adequate synopsis. There will be no admission charge and everyone is welcome to attend.

Life of Author

August von Kotzebue, the author of the play, first attained literary prominence in 1785. Within a few years he published six volumes of miscellaneous sketches and stories and more than twenty plays, the majority of which were translated into several European languages. The wide-spread popularity of his plays is shown by the fact that between the years 1798 and 1815 there were eighty-nine editions (either translations or adaptations) of his plays in England. His plays were translated or adapted on a large scale, by Sheridan and Monk Lewis among others, and his "Menschchenhass und Renc," called "The Stranger" in English, was for many years one of Mrs. Siddons' best known performances. Kotzebue wrote an enormous number of comedies—almost two hundred alto-

Dr. Mitchell Speaks On Mental Hygiene

Addressed Meeting of Physical Education Association Last Night

At the first meeting of the Quebec Physical Education Association in the R.V.C. Common Room last night, Dr. G. T. B. Mitchell spoke on "Mental Hygiene and Its Relation to Physical Education." In the course of his address, Dr. Mitchell defined mental hygiene and briefly sketched the changes and progress of that movement.

Dr. Mitchell stressed the importance of distinguishing between mental disorder and mental disease, saying that the latter had played no part in the study of mental hygiene, which is concerned primarily with deviations from a normal personality. This mental disorder makes its appearance gradually, and is due to the failure of an individual to meet with difficult situations.

At one end of the scale, normality being taken as the standard for mental health, person who found happiness by a sane adjustment to life's situations, and at the other end was the mentally sick individual who was unhappy because he failed to conform to life's difficulties.

The remainder of the address was concerned with the growth or education of an individual and its bearing upon mental hygiene. The meeting was concluded by questions from the audience and the announcement that the Association would next convene in December, when Miss Rathbone, a leading authority on posture, would lecture.

Biologists To Hear Talk On Evolution

Meeting Scheduled For Next Tuesday Evening

Continuing the policy of meeting in the evening instead of the afternoon, the Biological Society will hold its next meeting on Tuesday, November 20 at 8.15 p.m. in the main lecture theatre of the Biological Building. M. H. Friedman will give a talk on "The Evolution of the Stomach and Its Functions."

Friedman, who is in the department of Experimental Medicine, has been carrying on research work on the stomach in fishes, amphibians, reptiles, birds and mammals. He will deal with the physiological evidences for evolution which have in recent years been of great help in correlating anatomical findings. The lecture will be illustrated by lantern slides.

Mock Parliament Postponed

In view of an unfortunate error in one of Montreal's leading daily newspapers concerning the date set for the Mock Parliament originally scheduled for last night, the committee in charge deemed it advisable to postpone the event temporarily. It has been decided to hold the session next Thursday evening, November 22nd, at which the same participants as were intended for last evening's occasion will carry on the discussion concerning the resolution, "That Pacifism is an Impossible Creed for Canadians."

Economics Club Considers Silver Question Tonight

Leo Simkover and Art. Styles to Deliver Papers

TONIGHT at 8.30 in the Smoking Room of the Arts Building the Political Economy Club will hold its second meeting of the year, when Arthur D. Styles, Graduate student and Leo Simkover, Arts '35, deliver two papers on "Canada's Interest in the Silver Question." Both students are honours in Economics and Political Science.

Simkover will discuss the international silver situation as at present existing with special emphasis on Roosevelt's purchase policy as affecting the status of silver. Styles will briefly review the history of the silver question and in the light of past experience see what future there is for it as far as Canada is concerned. Under this heading comes the questions as to whether the use of silver can be expended in Canada's monetary system and whether the price of silver can be held up.

Both will touch upon the present question of the effect of a rising price of silver in Canada's oriental trade, contending that the view that it will enhance Chinese purchasing power is fallacious. Refreshments will be served at the close of the meeting. Arthur Bloomfield, the president, will be in the chair.

Glee Club

The Glee Club resumed its season's activities at a meeting held Tuesday in the Union. Rehearsal was begun on the three songs which will be performed in the near future at Dominion Douglas Church. It was announced that Mr. Norris would again direct the club this season.

The next meeting will take place Tuesday, November 20.

Amateur Actors Well Cast And Plays Ably Produced by Directors

By N. M.

LAST EVENING at the Central Y.M.C.A., the initial productions of the Workshop Department took place at 8.15 p.m. The program of three one act plays, "Spreading the News," by Lady Gregory; "The Intruder," by Maeterlinck; and "Weatherwise," by Noel Coward, was marked by the attendance of a large audience of friends and students. These three plays were respectively produced by Lawrence MacGregor, Harriet Colby and Colin Cam. The sets were constructed by Lloyd Davies and his crew. "Spreading the News," a comedy by Lady Gregory, was directed by Lawrence MacGregor, and concerns the almost disastrous results of village gossip in a rural Irish community. As is usually the case with dialect plays, the amateur performers had difficulty with the Irish accent required, but on the whole the play was a happy choice. The cast held the interest of the audience all the way, and each pair showed a good understanding of his or her role. All the parts were adequately handled and there was no one outstanding performer, which is often considered an advantage in an amateur production.

Mood Tragic
Harriet Colby directed the second play, "The Intruder" by Maurice Maeterlinck. This play was in a more tragic mood than the other and required more serious attention from both the cast and the audience. The plot centered about an old blind man who is the only member of the family to suspect the approaching death of his daughter, despite the assurance of his prosaic son-in-law. The

Stability, Taxation And Recovery

THE recent disturbances in the United States, and the even later election demonstrations, resulting in the shedding of blood, afford serious thought for reflection. Although the people of the United States have re-endorsed the New Deal and its wide spread plans, what will happen if it fails? People are waiting just so long to see whether it will succeed or fail. Business is adversely affected by this attitude — investors scarcely feel that they wish to promote new projects when they are not sure what will happen tomorrow. Consequently business is lagging — and unless there is a decided change for the better there will be more and far more serious trouble than anything that has yet occurred.

This tendency of unrest, this wait and see attitude, is to be seen in many other parts of the world. In Germany, Hitler is keeping the masses under the control of his government by the use of those methods so picturesquely described by that famous German, Bismarck, as 'blood and iron.' France is in a state of chaos — the budget is unbalanced, there is no sign of a really powerful or stable government stepping in to take over the reins of power — there is a movement among the war veterans to form a new and all prevailing party that may turn out to be the French fascists. In the Balkans, the firebox of Europe, a situation synonymous to that of a live volcano, exists; no one knows when the lid may not blow off. Italy, England, and a few of the Scandinavian countries alone seem to have a firm foundation upon which they may build to bring back prosperity.

The keystone of the arch of their economic state rests on taxation; the majority of the last named countries have balanced budgets, which they have only been able to attain by increasing taxation rates; which has been done. In Italy and England particularly a large part of the budget goes to cover social relief expenditures; the said expenditures have prevented absolute discomfort or distress, and even led to a certain measure of economic ease for the vast multitudes. There has in effect been a redistribution of wealth by means of the exercise of government power. There are still many extremely wealthy people in those countries, but there are also very few who are starving, or who are forced to walk the streets cold and hungry. Can the same be said of Canada or the United States?

To return to prosperity it is obvious that indiscriminate borrowing must cease — that expenditures must be paid out of revenue — that revenue can only be raised by increased taxation — that a more even method of distribution of wealth must be brought about by returning to the poor and unemployed some of these taxes, whether it be in the form of work or pure charity.

Foreign Languages

FOR the most part, the study of a foreign language is motivated by a desire to acquaint oneself, first and foremost, with the literature of a certain nature. Rarely do we find one who, with the possible exception of the professional linguist, philologist or the "much-travelled man," who would take the pains to acquire a working knowledge of a strange language merely for its own sake. Language, in any instance, is primarily a means to an end, rather than an end in itself. Thus the student of French, German or Spanish is one who, far from merely aiming at a mastery of these tongues themselves, expects to familiarize himself with the culture and national characteristics in their original form of the countries where these languages are spoken.

Many argue, however, and with no small amount of justification, that the average student should not diffuse his energies by acquainting himself with the language and literature of alien peoples before he acquires a more thorough grounding in his own. The time is doubly ill-spent, since at most only a very superficial command of the tongue is obtained. This argument, despite its logical conviction, suffers from the fact that it expresses the extreme attitude, one which fails to take into account the other side of the question. Yet it is not difficult to realize that the wisest choice is the one which provides for a moderately sound footing in one's own culture together with a general acquaintance with others. Depth as well as breadth is necessary, and if one specializes in one particular field, a certain amount of proficiency in others, even if it is superficial, is of great benefit to one who aims at a full understanding and appreciation of his subject.

For this reason, while each English-speaking student or layman is urged to concentrate upon his own native compositions, he should by no means ignore those of other lands. Besides the fact that this would provide for a broader and more worldly outlook upon culture in general, it is an important factor in establishing a better understanding and appreciation of foreign peoples, and in consequently procuring a greater amount of amity and goodwill as between nations.

HOOF PRINTS OF PEGASUS

On Mount Royal

The clamour of the city dials below;
The sparrows chirp and chatter 'round the hill;
The horsemen clop behind me and then go
To leave me puff my pipe and brood my fill.

I see grey mists beyond—and oft through these
The river's silvery ribbons twist and wind;
The cloudy breaks above—and on the trees
A filtering path the dusky sun-rays find.

Sweet solitude, yet sad! 'Tis shared alone
By those who've passed beyond our mortal ken.
Their slumbers—look! the rolling clouds have gone,
The sun shines warm; arise, rejoice again!
CHRISTOPHER HAWKINS.

The Last Leaf

(After the French of Theophile Gautier)
In the forest, bare and blighted,
On the bough, half seen, half heard,
One forgotten leaf is sighted,
Nothing but a leaf, a bird.

In my soul no more is staying
But a lone love singing clear—
But the wind of autumn braying
Will not let me hear.

Bird is gone and leaf is falling;
Love is dead, with winter seen.
Little bird, come for me, calling;
On my grave, when trees are green.

Credo

I look at a city spread in a plain
Of white and throbbing mechanism,
And I sense that an intellect lies in the steel,
(Everywhere is spirit mind.)
When I was a child I used to sit
In the golden puddles
Beyond the sea,
And the waves would creep to touch my feet,
Then satisfied, retire.
There are times, too, when wind is intimate,
Caresses with fingers that know my face,
Introducing me to a crimson leaf
With a gentle breath.
Like the touch of the sea and caress of the wind
Is the scent of a flower, feel of the earth,
Sight of wide sky and the kiss of the sun.
(Everywhere is spirit love.)
Within my heart a small voice speaks,
Murmurs the whole of the day aware,
Of right and wrong, and beauty, and truth,
(For everywhere is spirit soul.)

You knew that the bodies of dead men make
Eternally rich the soil of earth.
But did you think how
Their love is the touch of
The sea, and the breeze, and a flower's breath?
And their mind is the Progress of man, and their soul
Is the voice that betters the race?
For ever the flesh and spirit work,
And you, and I, shall use, and add,
And use again,
Eternally.

LISTENIN'-IN BY ELENPY

Richard Crooks

A SWIFT-WINGED seaplane buzzing up from the horizon, sailing overhead and after a moment's uncertain circling, landing with a graceful splash in the deep waters off Cape Hatteras, is not an unusual sight. But to see that plane linger for three or four hours, bobbing lightly on the waves might arouse a certain amount of curiosity. Closer investigation would reveal an opera tenor quietly fishing for sharks and amberjacks.

This eccentric fisherman is none other than Richard Crooks, the famous tenor of the Metropolitan, and a star of many radio broadcasts. Besides being a passionate flier and fisherman Crooks is also an enthusiastic swimmer, golfer, aquaplaner, and a devotee of any other strenuous outdoor sport. He is also a recognized champion of handball.

Twenty-five years ago, at the age of eight, Crooks sang in the church choir of his home-town, Trenton, N. J. At the age of twelve he went to New York to sing solos at All Angels' Church. It was about this time also that he shared honours with Henrietta Schumann-Heink at a music festival in Ocean Grove, N. J. The motherly contralto was very pleased with the boy, and kissed him as a mark of her favour. She also presented him with a bouquet of flowers for his mother.

At the time the war broke out, Crooks's voice was beginning to change. He therefore refrained from singing. Instead he lied about his age and enlisted in the flying service. Clarence Chamberlain, who is still a close friend of the singer, taught him the tricks of the air. Fortunately for operatic circles the age of the young Crooks was discovered, and he was discharged from the service before he had a chance to get to the front.

On returning from the service, he found a job flying a mail plane. He also resumed his work in the choir; and at the same time found a position with an insurance company. All this helped him to get some money with which to continue his musical studies. At the age of twenty-one he had enough money to consider getting married. He promptly proceeded to marry the girl who sat next to him in grammar and high school, Mildred Pine. They have two children, neither of which is destined to be a musician.

After his marriage Crooks began spending his summers in Germany, studying German lieder under Michael Rauschelsen, one of Europe's most famous music teachers. In Munich he also met up with Bruno Walter who taught him all about Mozart interpretation. All this activity was gradually maturing the artist in Crooks. He sang for many noted musicians, and when, in 1932, he sang for Haensel, the latter predicted a brilliant career for the young man from America.

In 1923 Crooks sang for Damrosch who was so enthused by his voice, that he forthwith engaged him for the third act of "Siegfried" with the New York Symphony both in New York and on a tour. This launched Crooks on his professional career. Engagements from then on kept coming thick and fast, and in 1925 the young man, was invading the concert stage of such European centres as London, Berlin, Munich, and Vienna with a great deal of success.

His operatic debut came at the Hamburg Opera in 1927, when he sang Cavaradossi in Puccini's "Tosca." He proved to be a born actor. The audience was very enthusiastic. Recalls were frequent during the whole performance, and sixteen curtain calls were recorded. The crowd stayed on even after the lights had been shut off and about two hundred people stayed even then and followed his cab to the hotel. Another of his operatic experiences was when in Budapest he sang the title role of "Faust." His own singing was done in the original French, the Marguerite was sung in German, one of the other principals could sing only in Czech, and the rest of the cast and chorus sang in Hungarian!

A few times Crooks was obliged to give up the opportunity of joining the Metropolitan, but he finally landed on the stage from which he received his first operatic inspirations. More recently he has been called upon to participate in radio broadcasts more and more. He sees in the radio a great means for developing the public's taste for good music.

Despite his foreign singing and conquests he is still the typical American who likes detective stories, movies, and sports. His favourite light reading is Edgar Wallace.

Studio Quips

RADIO, like any other profession, has its comic side. In the following paragraphs we will try to tell you of some of the more recent comic happenings.

The other day Jack Benny, famous radio comedian, was attempting to inveigle Don Bestor into cashing a cheque. Bestor, of course, refused. Embittered and disappointed, Jack turned to one of the onlookers and remarked, "Bestor is so tight he wouldn't even pay a dime to see the Statue of Liberty do a fan dance."

Wendell Hall, the Red-Headed Music Maker, has a habit of rehearsing in his own office at the Merchandise Mart in Chicago. He chooses the time when no visitors are allowed into the building, such as nights and Sunday afternoons. At such times all entrants into the building must sign a register.

The other night Wendell was rehearsing. He sang the verse to a song in a high key, and the chorus in a low. Eventually a knock was heard on the door, and the night watchman poked his head through the partly-open door.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Hall," he said, "but the other fellow will have to sign the book, too."

"Which other fellow?" queried the singer, somewhat taken aback.

"Why, the guy that's singin' with you."

It took Wendell some time to convince the watchman that he was the "guy."

The Editor,
The McGill Daily:

Dear Sir:—
Having journeyed through the early snow-banks of midwinter in the sticks of Tros Pistolets of St. (Saint) Cuss-pidore to Moxy Hall to witness the lads' event of a Mock Parliament, Hen Shaker, Speaker, and arriving at 8:15:50, we were positively astounded and disgusted to hear that said argumentation had gone up spout and all the seats were empty and not even Bill Gentleman around. However, having listened to the speeches attentively for two hours, and particularly enjoying Schafhausen's perfect eloquence, poise, verve, wit, sex appeal, and coloured socks, we came down to the Union to see if there was any sign of Muck-lishness thereabouts. We woke up the night editor of the Dilly-Daily, only to be told that the Parliament had been held two weeks ago and he wasn't interested anyway and what was the Dilly but a notice board and not even that, etc. We put him back to sleep again and left. On the way out we met a fellow by the name of Place who asked us where the Dilly office was, as he wanted to read some remarks passed by Know-len who chewed up blue pencils each day in said office.

But back to the debate. Not a sign, nothing in the Union Ballroom but a draught that would freeze a Polar Bear's gizzard. So we left, after taking another squirt at Today's Event . . . Parliament . . . Moxy Hall . . . phooey.

Not too bent back to Tros So-on yet, we perambulated down to the Star, took a second and a third squirt at a certain issue . . . Parliament . . . Union Ballroom . . . Thursday . . . herts. So-ho that's the way they do, eh Watson? Well we're on the trail and we'll corral that d—Muck Parliament yet, by Yussifer. We telephoned Yen Fakier at the . . . shhh, shhh . . . And say he, yes indeed by gad we had a bally Parliament for some night this week, yes, but you know how it is, oh I didn't feel like it, yes, and so we just . . . oh leave me alone, yes, yes Mary, I'm coming.

Well we just gave up, that's all. We just dumped our ripe tomatoes and over-ripe yeggs in the Pit and crawled home. Yessir crawled home to Tros Tolets where they ain't no McGill Daily and there ain't no Parliament and there no ten commandment and a man can raise a thoiist. We got our thoiist too . . . just let us catch them blabbing about Parliaments etc agin' . . . just let that happen once . . . we'll raise a thoiist and some dust, be Jompin' Jimminy, that'll stop 'em if they ain't dead of Stoodent Apathy by then . . .

MRT

THE twenty-fifth major production of the MRT was presented last night to a large audience in the ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. The play, "The Man With A Load of Mischief," by Ashley Dukes, will be on the boards until Saturday evening. The play, according to the "Cue," the MRT magazine, was a brilliant success in London. It seems, however, that it will not be quite as popular in Montreal.

The play carries us back to the early 19th century, when a debauched aristocracy ruled English social life. The three scenes of the play are laid in an inn where the various characters arrive after an accident on the road. The Nobleman and his Man have just rescued the Lady and the Maid, and are forced to spend several days at the Inn. The Nobleman is anxious to besmirch the honour of the Lady in order to avenge a previous gambling loss to the Lady's ex-protector, a prince. She, however, successfully repulses his advances, only to succumb to his cultured philosophical and gloomy servant, the Man. The Nobleman had encouraged this romance in order to cheapen the Lady. All comes out well in the end and the Lady rides away with her lowly lover.

The play does not hold the interest of the spectator,—it is artificial, boring and futile. The humour is forced, although the Innkeeper is rather amusing in his soliloquy in the beginning of the third act. The general impression is that the MRT should have spent its time in the production of a worthier play. It seems like wasted effort.

The acting was mediocre, although the Maid, played by Lorna Sheard, showed signs of ability. The Lady, as portrayed by Eleanor Nicol, enunciated her lines clearly, but lacked force and sincerity. The Nobleman who had the most difficult part, spoke his lines with artificiality, and forgot them occasionally.

The setting was well conceived and carried out with admirable taste and skill. The direction was fair. It is much to be regretted that the Montreal Repertory Theatre did not open its 1934-35 season with greater éclat—the main fault must certainly be laid to those who chose this play for a major production.

Dear Sir:—
May I quote from a London newspaper of September 10th:
"The English are the smartest white people there are," was Will Rogers' comment on yesterday's tame Hyde Park session, when 5000 Fascists demonstrated and 5000 anti-Fascists counter-demonstrated with 600 police to keep order.

"They will never have Communism, Fascism, Hitlerism or Nudism," the United States cowboy-showman declared. "They have a park here, Hyde Park, which was just built for people that are agin' somethin'. Blackshirts were holding their meeting. Two hundred yards away Communists were holding theirs. And in between was all London laughing at both of 'em."

We in Canada are not so essentially different from the English that we need work ourselves into a lather over the Fascist question here. One race in particular has been sorely abused by Fascist dictators. They have our sincere sympathy but we, as the voice of Canada's most representative university, would do well to mind our own business rather than attempting to (Continued on page 4)

UNDER THE SPORTLIGHT

A. D. S.

APOLOGIES to Don Young who last Saturday played his last game with the Red and White football team. A writer recently stated in the DAILY that Young first came under the football searchlight when entering McGill seven years ago. As a matter of fact, Don Young had acquired a national reputation as an outstanding wing when playing with the famous Ottawa Rough Riders before entering McGill. The student body owe a great debt of gratitude to this peerless athlete whose name now ranks with such Red super-stars as Billington, who have earned a permanent niche in the McGill Hall of Fame.

POSSIBLY the most trying (and certainly the most tiring for all concerned, players and spectators alike) play in Canadian football is to witness the ball-carrier plunge blindly into a solid wall of stalwarts on a line play. The game, as played across the international border, gives the spectators a chance for his price of admission, especially since the development of the lateral-backward pass, or series of such passes, as brought to perfection this season by Colgate, which has put would-be tacklers entirely out of position and completely disorganized the timing and set-up of the attacking forces.

COLGATE'S revolutionary tactics are bound to have revolutionary results upon the game as played next autumn across the border. Many American teams have this fall resorted to the Canadian feature of lateral passes and a comparison between forward-passes and lateral-passes in their yard-gaining possibilities, as found in last Saturday's games, may be interesting reading for our readers. The following table deals with this angle.

Team	Average		Average		Gain
	Forwards tried	Forwards completed	Laterals tried	Laterals completed
Columbia	14	11	15	4	19
Notre Dame	16	4	23	2	5
Yale	11	6	8	2	12
Harvard	5	2	10	1	9
Princeton	11	5	9	6	8
Temple	14	7	11	1	8

HAND it to United States Senator Huey (Kingfish) Long! This flamboyant friend of Louisiana State College recently procured the election of one of his backfield aces to the Louisiana Senate, while making another a Colonel of the National Guard when making the only touchdown for his team last Saturday. Long Live the Kingfish!

THROUGH the omnipresent ghost-writer, Sprague Cleghorn writes entertainingly of hockey in the current issue of a Canadian semi-monthly. Characterizing any player as being mentally unbalanced who publicly forecast the issue of any game, this internationally known player and official answers from the angle of an insider the question most often propounded the big-time hockey performer: "Are ya goin' t' win tonight's game?"

UNWILLING to answer if the game of yesteryear was tougher than its contemporaneous model, Cleghorn holds strongly to the opinion that players, rules and general conditions were decidedly tougher than they are today which, according to common observation, too often approaches the rough-and-tumble tussles of gladiatorial days of Rome when nothing was barred, not even the free admission gates of the colossal Coliseum. And if any attestation of these facts are necessary the Bad Man of Hockey is willing to allow a close-up inspection of his body where one would require a battery of adding machines to tabulate the various scars upon which a quarter of a century of bruising hockey have left their permanent imprint.

THANKFUL as we are for the demise of the two-bucks-and-a-kick game that passed for Canadian football until very recent times, we cannot but feel sorry for the die-hards who claim our present game is the utopia whether considered from the playing or spectatorial viewpoint.

IF college football in Canada is to attract the paying customers (alas, poor students must contribute to the upkeep of the present variety of football, be it good, bad, or indifferent), the powers that be must put their cloth to measure the demands of the cash customer. Shapeliness did pioneer service in opening up the Canadian game with forward-passing and what not, so it is to be hoped that Warren Snyder (merely to mention one authority) will seek to eliminate several other of the tiresome features of the present game, without standing accused of being pro-American in his reform. For reform cannot come too quickly say those who pay to see where the better games are being played.

HAD we the necessary qualifications to select an All-Canadian intercollegiate aggregation of stars, based on their 1934 performance, we would include Don Young, "Jo Jo" Smith and Boyce Sherk of Western. Not because these names were picked by what is by common agreement among the initiated, known as Canada's greatest students of the game, but because unbiased sentiment and fair sportsmanship point clearly to their inclusion among such a galaxy of stars. We are possibly too introverted by nature to acclaim these players as worthy of the highest rating, though many, devoid of our natural equipment, would automatically seek to consign them to the waste-paper basket.

Senior Hockey Team Loses To Canadiens, 2-0

First Period Goals Spell Defeat For McGill Men

Boudreau and Blanchard Score For Canucks — McGill Team Stopped by Archambault — Forwards Show Marked Improvement — Crosby and Morse Play Outstanding Games — Many Penalties Feature Rugged Encounter

CANADIENS flashy hockey team turned aside McGill's threat for the senior city league leadership last night when it rapped home two goals in the first period of a hotly contested game and held off every McGill thrust during the remaining forty minutes of play. By virtue of last night's win, Canadiens took vengeance on the Redmen for the defeat handed them by Bobby Bell's squad in the city league play-offs last year. Victory for the French squad put them up on top of the league tied with Ottawa, who however have played one game less than the Canucks.

Boudreau Opens Score

The game had scarcely got underway last night when Canadiens went into the lead. On the face-off Boudreau, brilliant young wingman for the French squad took the puck and raced down the left boards. For a brief moment he was left unchecked and in that time succeeded in skating in on McHugh and pushing the puck into the net. It was a neat effort for the former Moncton boy, who registered his fourth goal of the season on the rush.

McGill settled down to steady hockey after this brief lapse and held off the Canadiens until the final minute of the period. At the same time the Redmen had their share of the play, and on several occasions broke through the French defense, only to be foiled by the fast work of Archambault, the little Canuck goater. In the final minute of play Fernand Ranger, another of last year's junior men, skated down the left wing and passed out to Blanchard who was covered by three McGill men in front of the Red team's net. In spite of this guard the Canadian forward managed to get his stick on the puck and batted it into the net.

Reds Lead Attack

McGill held the upper hand during the second period, but Archambault was unbeatable, and turned aside shots from Crosby, Morse and Elie that seemed headed for sure goals. Crutchfield was through on one occasion for a clear shot on the net, but Wilson rugged defenceman of the French sextette, tripped him and saved a goal, though he took a penalty. Boudreau and Pilon led several dangerous rushes on McHugh but Holly turned them all aside. Boudreau made the prettiest play of the period when he feinted the McGill defence out of position, and coasted in for a clear shot on the Red goal, but he misjudged the aim and sent the puck wide of the net. During the last few minutes of the period the McGill team kept the puck continually in Canadian territory, and the French squad was forced to shoot the puck down the ice to hold off the attack.

In the final session Bobby Bell's men took the offensive from the initial face-off, and kept up four and five man drives throughout the entire twenty minutes. Four Canadian penalties opened the way for a concentrated attack, but the French rear guard was unbeatable again. Archambault was forced to make brilliant saves time and again from Elie, Crutchfield, Morse and Duff, and each time held off the Red attack. Frequent solo rushes by the Canadiens, when McGill was playing with five men up the ice nearly resulted in a larger score for the Canucks, but McHugh rose to the occasion and turned aside every drive. One save from Fernand Ranger was a particularly sensational effort as the Canadian forward had all the time in the world to pick his corner. McGill was still attacking, and Canadiens were again shooting the puck up the ice when the final whistle blew.

McGill Team Improved

The McGill team, though defeated, showed marked improvement over its game with Verdun. The forwards were skating faster and checking harder than in the first game. The passing of the team was still erratic as time and again the puck went astray. Crosby, Morse and Elie formed the more dangerous forward line for McGill and except for Archambault's outstanding work would have scored several goals. Morse was particularly effective, making plays for his other forwards, and covering his man at all times. The fair haired wingman did the best job of back-checking of any of the team.

Lamb, Crutchfield and Duff worked well together, but were held in check by the fast front line of the Canadiens. Dickinson was used more than in the game with Verdun and went well with both lines. The defense was up to its usual good standard. Melkejohn and MacKay body-checked with more assurance than in their first game, and made a good job of clearing the puck from in front of the net. Wigle and Hall, making their first start of the season, showed great form. Wigle was used sparingly, but played well when on the ice. Hall saw play in Junior Polo Team Takes Over M.A.A.

Savage, Elliot, and Ede Score In First Period

SENIOR ENCOUNTER OFF TILL NEXT WEEK

Juniors Meet K. of C., League Leaders Next Monday Night

TAKING the game three goals to one, the McGill junior water polo team defeated the M.A.A. "Blues" in the latter's home tank. The second game on the card, McGill seniors vs. M.A.A. seniors, was postponed because about five of the Redmen were engaged in lectures.

All counters were made in the first half. Hugh Savage, Donny Elliot and Frank Ede scoring for McGill. The M.A.A. marker was shot by Rose, who played right forward.

In Second Place

This victory puts the Juniors only two points below the Knights of Columbus "Blues" who lead the city league, having lost no game thus far in their season's schedule. The McGill poloists have been defeated only once and that time by the leaders.

Last night's game gave evidence of the Redmen's real worth which should come to the fore in their next assignment when they meet the K. of C. players at the Knight's pool next Monday night. A win will give them a tie for first place in the league standing.

Savage Scored First

Leading the attack in the first half backed by Johnny Powell, at wing, and Donald Elliot, playing forward, Hugh Savage passed the ball past Lindsay in the M.A.A. net to chalk up the first point. A few minutes later in a counter-attack, Rose on a pass from Cassils evened the score, outwitting Carlyle Gilmour, the McGill goal tender.

Navigating up the side, Elliot shot from the crease line and scored breaking the tie in favour of the Redmen. A minute before the time keeper's whistle blew, McGill's final tally was made by Ede who angled the leather into the net after receiving a pass from Smyth.

The Senior game, unfortunately postponed, will be played some time next week.

Saxon's Squad To Face Y.M.C.A. Soon

McGill Wrestlers Meet Local Team November 27th.

REGULAR FIXTURE

FRANK SAXON, the mentor of the McGill and Y.M.C.A. wrestling squads announces that an interclub match is being arranged between these two clubs to take place at the Field House on November 24. The McGill team has not yet been chosen but every member of the club is anxious to get some ring experience and is looking forward to being one of the chosen few to take part in these first matches.

Matches such as these between the two clubs will be regular features throughout the year, and it is hoped that some arrangement may be made with other amateur clubs in the city to stage exhibition bouts. These semi-serious contests are very important from the McGill standpoint as the lack of experience in competition has always been a handicap to the team. No matter how clever a wrestler may be at the practices, the nervous tension and the lack of savoir faire at an intercollegiate debut is enough to offset any talent to which he may lay claim.

Forbes Doubtful

There is some possibility that the practices will continue to be held at the Montreal High School gym for some time if arrangements can be made with gym club, and the inter-faculty basketball teams. The Major however is doubtful.

Of last year's team "Gus Sonnenberg" Stewart, has been out regularly for the past three weeks. Billingsley has appeared less regularly but has been getting into condition at the Y.M.C.A. practices on Thursdays and Saturdays. He has gained weight over the summer and will wrestle in the 165 pound class this year. Johnson has also stepped up 10 pounds and will be seen in the 155 pound class. He has been out three times a week and is in fine condition for the exhibition. Black having failed to make any gain during the summer, is still in the 125 class where he is getting a lot of competition from Holmes and Fish. Holmes is hovering between the 125 and 118 pound classes and is attempting to get down to the latter class to give Tommy Southwood, a very irregular trainer, a run for a position on the team.

are being held up for a few days.

On Saturday the committee will convene again and after this date more definite arrangements will be announced. It is pointed out by the committee that there is already a demand for tickets and that those intending to go are reminded to make their reservations early. The names of those desiring tickets should be left with the various faculty representatives as soon as possible. Tickets will be sold on Friday by these representatives as well as by the Janitors of the various buildings on the Campus.

gather and in addition several novels and historical works. His success was due less to any conspicuous literary or poetic ability than to an extraordinary facility in the invention of effective situations. English Summary Of German Play

(Reprinted from yesterday's issue)

Die Deutschen Kleinstadter

The play, written at the beginning of the last century, shows us a typical German small town—Krahwinkel. The inhabitants are filled with their own importance and an exaggerated opinion of the dignity of titles.

Sabine, the charming daughter of the Bürgermeister, has been away in the Capital for a year and has there fallen in love with Olmers. With great impatience she now awaits his arrival to claim her hand in marriage. There is need of haste for if he does not arrive soon to save her she is to be married off to Sperling—the Poet of Krahwinkel. The engagement is to be announced on the following day at a great festival at which a poor woman who had stolen a cow years before is finally to be brought to justice on the pillory, after nine years of law proceedings with a rival town about who was to have the honour of punishing her. The Bürgermeister considers it a great triumph that his own town has won the privilege.

The Plot Thickens

While Sabine is gazing in a love-lorn fashion at Olmer's portrait she is discovered by her grandmother, Frau Untersteuereinsnehmerin Starr and in order to pacify the fussy old lady she pretends that the portrait is that of the King. Soon after, the arrival of a stranger is announced, introduced by a letter from no less a person than His Excellency the Minister himself. It is Olmers—to Sabine's great joy. All rejoice at the arrival of a distinguished guest and the curtain falls as all rush forward to meet him—the men crowding out of the doorway—the women, however, showing that in spite of excitement, the well-bred lady of Krahwinkel does not forget her position.

In Act 2 Olmers is actually there. He succeeds in immediately making a very bad impression by ignoring all the fine titles of the high society of Krahwinkel and he actually addresses Frau Untersteuereinsnehmerin Starr—as Madam! He and Sabine are discreet and pretend not to know one another. Although they are longing to be left alone together there seems little hope of that. Suddenly Frau Starr recognises him as the original of Sabine's portrait and concludes that he is the King, travelling incognito. All are overcome with excitement, the whole town is summoned to do him honour and plans are made for his entertainment. In the midst of this Olmers walks in, is greeted as King, thinks he is in a madhouse, becomes angry, declares he is plain Mr. Olmers and walks out. Sabine is confronted and forced to admit she had lied—it is not the picture of the King, but merely a portrait she had found in the Capital of an unknown man; All disperse to cancel the arrangements for greeting the King and Sperling takes advantage of a few moments alone with Sabine to declare his love. Olmers unsuspectingly walks in on this scene, is horrified at what he hears. There follows a conversation at cross purposes, in which Olmers and Sabine manage to assure one another of their love, without letting Sperling suspect that he is not the successful suitor. The scene closes with Olmers leading Sabine off to dinner, leaving the disappointed but always gallant Sperling to escort Frau Untersteuereinsnehmerin Starr.

Becomes Unpopular

Olmers makes himself more and more unpopular. His free city manners, lack of all restraint and ceremony, and worst of all, his lack of a title shock these good people, and when in the third act he finally broaches the object of his visit to the Bürgermeister and asks for Sabine's hand in marriage his proposal is received with little enthusiasm. However, a family council is called, the matter is placed before them, and the unanimous decision is reached that "he shall not have her." In order, however, not to disappoint him too much, nor to appear rude to His Excellency, who had introduced him, it is proposed to offer him another wife—one of the old aunts, who has been a widow for nearly a year and who is coyly prepared to sacrifice herself so that Olmers may be privileged to become a member of THE FAMILY and settle down in Krahwinkel to learn manners and good conduct.

Olmers is at a loss to understand what all this signifies and turns in relief to Sabine who enters. They are not allowed much time together, however, for the ubiquitous Sperling is close on her heels. There follows another delightful scene in which Sperling is made to act as go-between for Sabine and Olmers, and arranges a meeting for them that evening in front of her house. They go off in great glee, leaving Sperling to wonder if, by any chance, he is being made a fool of.

The fourth act takes place outside the Bürgermeister's house. Sabine and Olmers meet but are constantly forced into hiding by peering relatives or the passing night watchman. Thus they are hidden behind the lamp-post when Klaus arrives with the dreadful news that the delinquent, the poor woman who was to supply the entertainment as the pillory next day, had fled taking with her a ham and three sausages belonging to Klaus. She left a note thanking the Bürgermeister's brother Herr Starr, for having lent her books from his circulating library, which had given her the idea of escaping. The Bürgermeister is beside himself with rage and disappointment, that the great triumph of the next day's public punishment of the criminal should come to nothing, while Klaus bewails his lost ham and sausages. Olmers and Sabine are discovered behind the lamp-post and Olmers undertakes to make good with His Excellency the dreadful breach of discipline and justice, which might have the direst consequences—on condition that he be allowed to marry Sabine. This puts the Bürgermeister in a quandary, he summons his mother, Frau Starr, who at first sticks to her decision that "he shall not have her" no matter what the circumstances; but she is completely won over when she hears that he has a title after all—in fact a very fine title, Geheim Kommissionsrat. All are happy and enter the house to celebrate the engagement, except poor Sperling who has not only lost his fiancée, but also all chance of obtaining an audience for the poem which he had written for the festivities at the pillory the next day. He has only one very wan hope left—perhaps the night watchman will pass by again and be induced to listen to his masterpiece.

Business Conditions in Canada in the First Eight Months of 1934

The marked betterment in Canadian economic conditions during the present year is indicated by the trend of major factors. The averages of important indexes during the first eight months of 1934 compared with the comparable figures for the same period of the preceding year, are an excellent measure of the progress made since the low point of the depression was reached in the early months of 1933.

The index of the physical volume of business averaged 93.6 in the first eight months of 1934, a gain of 23.6 p.c. over 75.7, the standing in the same period of last year. The business index is based on 45 factors relating to the trend in mineral production, manufacturing, construction, electric power and distribution. The factors are individually adjusted for seasonal tendencies and expressed as a percentage of the monthly average for the base year of 1926. The markedly higher level of this index during the present year indicates the extent of the acceleration in business and productive operations.

The index of the cost of living advanced from 77.9 to 78.8, showing the very modest gain of 1.1 p.c. The gains were mostly recorded in food and clothing, as fuel, rent and sundries reached slightly lower levels. The index of common stock prices averaged 86.0 in the first eight months of 1934. This compares with 64.8, the low level during the same period of last year. The gain in this comparison was consequently 33.1 p.c. Mining stock prices averaged 49.3 p.c. higher, the index being 129.4 compared with 86.7.

Bond prices computed from yields on Ontario government bonds reached an extremely high level in August, the index averaging 113.6 in the first eight months of the year. The gain over 101.8, the average for the same period of the preceding year, was 11.6 p.c., a marked increase in a factor not normally subject to wide fluctuation.

Index of Mineral Production in 1934

The index of mineral production based on nine factors was 134.2 in the first eight months of 1934 compared with 104.0 in the same period of 1933. The gain of nearly 28 p.c. indicates widespread gain in operations contingent in large measure upon the revival of demand in external markets. The exports of copper in various stages of manufacture were 186,600,000 pounds action dragged towards the end but the wierd mood of music and intangible horror was held throughout. "Weatherwise," a comedy by Noel Coward, was directed by Colin Cam. The plot deals with the confusion caused when a hitherto normal English Lady suffers from the delusion that she is a dog, the relapses occurring whenever the weather is mentioned. Lorraine Tasker who has been seen before on the Workshop stage played the part of Lady Warple with keen understanding of its humorous and satirical possibilities, and showed a dramatic technique of high order. The whole cast displayed an intelligent grasp of the plot, and managed to put over the Cowardine lines in an amusing and convincing manner. They worked, well together and the play

Direction Capable

The plays showed generally the result of capable direction, although all casts displayed a tendency to work individually rather than as a whole, and occasionally the cues were slow to be taken up.

Howard Stikeman, the president of the Players' Club, gave a short address in which he reminded the audience that the forthcoming Players' Club major production, "The Devil's Disciple" by George Bernard Shaw, which will take place at Moyse Hall on December 13, 14 and 15.

The chairman of the Workshop, Harriet Colby, outlined the policy of the department, namely the experimental application of dramatic theory as studied by the Club by means of studio classes.
